CONDITIONS FINE IN 80TH DIVISION, COL. EDIE WRITES

With Few Exceptions, Men Are Healthy and Contented, Declares Chief Surgeon.

305TH MEN ARE HOMESICK

This is Only Organization Letter Mentions as Suffering from Lowered Morale; Average Man in Division Thinks He's Having a Fine Time.

In a recent letter to Mrs. Edie, Lieutenant Colonel Elliott B. Edie, chief surgeon of the 80th Division, in France, tells in a most interesting manner of the conditions under which the men are awaiting their return to the States, which, according to the War Department, will be in May.

"I went through a company of the 305th Infantry today," he says. "They have a good mess hall, clean kitchens, clean cooks and better food than they have at home. An officer attends every meal to see that the food is properly prepared, served hot, and that mess kits are sterilized and that nothing is wasted. All billets have stores in them. The bath house is heated and there are eight shower heads, with fine hot water. All clothing is washed on Saturday in the village, bath house by the platoon which has the most fallings during the week."

"There are no cases of venereal diseases in that company. If you find a group of 350 average young men in civil life in America who are to be classified for a minute with Company—20th Infantry, I'm sure they cannot be found in Fayette county. This is a representative of all the infantry outfits and the artillery is just as good."

"The worst thing about our area, beside the gloomy weather, is the billeting. The French houses are old and built of stone and not cheerful like our American houses. But they are the only kind they have here and you couldn't find enough wood in France to build barracks for the A. E. F. Barracks are used for mess halls and in some cases for sleeping rooms but there is more sickness in barracks than in billets."

"In the 305th Ammunition Train the physical condition of the men is fine but the morale is low, due to a number of things. The short gloomy days and homesickness are the worst factors. Their messes are well run, the food is excellent and abundant, as it is in the whole 80th Division. Each man has two pairs of good shoes, four pairs of socks, two pairs of breeches, one coat, one overcoat and raincoat. Their billets are the average of the area."

"The average man in the 80th Division thinks he is having a fine time, but all want to get home. We have all kinds of entertainment, schools, athletic, etc., and on the whole they are in fine physical condition. If the men hadn't hit us we would have had almost no sickness. The French have had a lot of flu and we couldn't escape it, but our epidemics have been energetically combated and well controlled. Since December 1, 1918, we have had 75 deaths, most of them from pneumonia, following the 'flu.' We have over 27,000 men."

Condition Encouraging.
The condition of R. C. Beebe, who is ill of pneumonia at his home at Star Junction, still continues to improve. The patient, rested well last night and reports received here regarding his condition are more encouraging.

PIG-PEN MURDER CASE CALLED FOR TRIAL IN COURT

Fred Griffen, Negro, Charged With Killing Wade Herrod at Florence Mine.

TWO OTHER HOMICIDES

Rosy Cadup Will be Arraigned Tuesday for Crime at Grindstone and Ralph Tate, Edenborn, on Thursday; Connellsville Men Are Found Guilty.

Two murder cases and a voluntary manslaughter case as a result of the premature peace celebration last November are scheduled for trial during the fourth week of the March term of criminal court which opened this morning in Uniontown.

Fred Griffen, a negro, was arraigned this morning for the murder of Wade Herrod, negro, at the Florence mine. The murder was a climax of a game of cards, being held in a pig pen.

B. H. Christine and John D. Sherrick of Connellsville were among the first five jurors chosen. Mr. Christine being No. 1 and Mr. Sherrick No. 4.

The dead man was not the intended victim of the negro's bullet. He was a spectator and was struck when Griffen fired at another he suspected of cheating at cards.

INTRUDER KILLED

Masontown Man Brains With Table Leg Man Who Forces Entrance.

Opposing an attempt to break into his home near Masontown by a man whom he then did not know, H. W. Weller, formerly of New Geneva, brained Joseph Walters, aged 29, a barber of Masontown, early Sunday morning as the man stepped into the Weller kitchen after having battered down the door. Weller had previously fired two shots from a revolver to frighten the man away but discarded the empty weapon for a table leg with which the fatal blow was inflicted. Walters died sometime later in the Uniontown hospital of a fractured skull. Weller gave himself up to Sheriff Thomas L. Howard but was released upon his own recognizance to appear when wanted.

Walters is said to have been considered quite harmless by Masontown residents although he was difficult to handle, it is said, when intoxicated. Mr. Weller moved into the D. L. Durr homestead from New Geneva only last week and did not know the man, when he was found prowling around the Weller home between 12:30 and 1 o'clock.

PRESBYTERIAN CANVASSERS SECURE NEARLY $18,000 IN NEW ERA FINANCIAL DRIVE

Figure Named Will Be Reached When All Members Have Been Seen.

SUNDAY SCHOOL OVER TOP

Victory Day Proves to Be Red Letter One for Congregation of the First Church Here; Team Captained by W. W. Smith Leads in Subscriptions.

Sunday was Victory Day in more than one way for the First Presbyterian church of Connellsville. Not only did the teams lead, raising for funds in the New Era financial drive by nearly $5,000 the goal set in the drive, but the Sunday school, aiming for an attendance of 500 by Easter, topped that mark by 50, with the result that a new goal of 550 was set.

To an hour less than the three specified for raising $15,000 for current expenses and benevolences the canvassers secured subscriptions totaling $17,841.66, which amount will be increased to $18,000 when persons missed in the canvass have been seen. As is always the case in a drive of this character the teams found some of the members absent from home.

Some of the teams completed their work in an hour, most of them in two hours. The team captained by W. W. Smith led with a total of $2,097. P. E. Markel's canvassers were second with $1,538.06, and T. J. Hooper's third with $1,262.50.

Fifteen teams participated in the drive. They were captained by W. W. Smith, W. W. Smith, R. H. Grim, H. G. May, T. J. Hooper, John Davis, Joseph McConnell, William Deuschler, W. R. Kenney, J. A. Armstrong, W. F. Brinkman, E. K. Dick, J. M. Young, William Thomas and P. E. Markel.

The subscriptions were divided as follows: Current expenses, $12,961.47; benevolence, $5,755.19; total, $18,716.66.

By teams the subscriptions were as follows, the last named being the executive committee for which C. W. Downs reported. This team did not canvass, the amounts representing subscriptions from church organizations:

	Cur. Ex.	Benev.	Total
Wright	$64.24	$185.24	$249.48

Davis	668.88	173.62	842.50
McConnell	357.37	170.79	528.16
Deuschler	478.10	244.40	722.50
Kenney	436.24	1,100.00	1,536.24
Armstrong	458.89	198.32	657.21
Dick	627.00	334.20	961.20
Brinkman	785.00	460.50	1,245.50
Thomas	436.24	234.52	670.76
Markel	1,042.40	395.66	1,438.06
Young	383.50	184.90	568.40
Downs	1,262.50	1,431.30	2,693.80

Following the canvass the teams reported at the church where the results were tabulated. After this lunch was served and by the time it was over the hour for the evening service had arrived. Rev. Froude, disposed with the sermon and gave the time over to hearing reports which were made by the captains and the reading of which prompted much applause.

Previous to the canvass the teams attended services at the hour for morning worship and participated afterward in a brief dedicatory service. After this lunch was served in the church dining room. For five minutes before starting out the canvassers engaged in a five-minute prayer service.

PITTSBURGH, March 24.—That the Presbyterian churches of Pittsburgh have oversubscribed $2,000,000—their portion of the $38,000,000 to be raised by the church throughout the country yesterday—was indicated by the first returns gathered last night by Dr. A. M. Buchanan, secretary of the Presbyterian New Era committee. The attention of the churches will now be directed to the "ingathering of souls" membership campaign to conclude on Easter Sunday.

The NEW SEASON of FASHIONS ANNOUNCING OUR SPRING OPENING Monday, March Twenty-Four

Fashioned according to the developed ideas of the originators, taking all the originality of line, form, and color in the importations from Paris, adding the brilliant conceptions, innovations, duplications, and adaptations of the New York houses—such is the history of the fashions we are now ready to disclose for Spring 1919.

The ending of the war left Paris and New York short of some of the brilliant novelties of ante bellum days, but not of the brilliant artistry and skill of the creators of fashions.

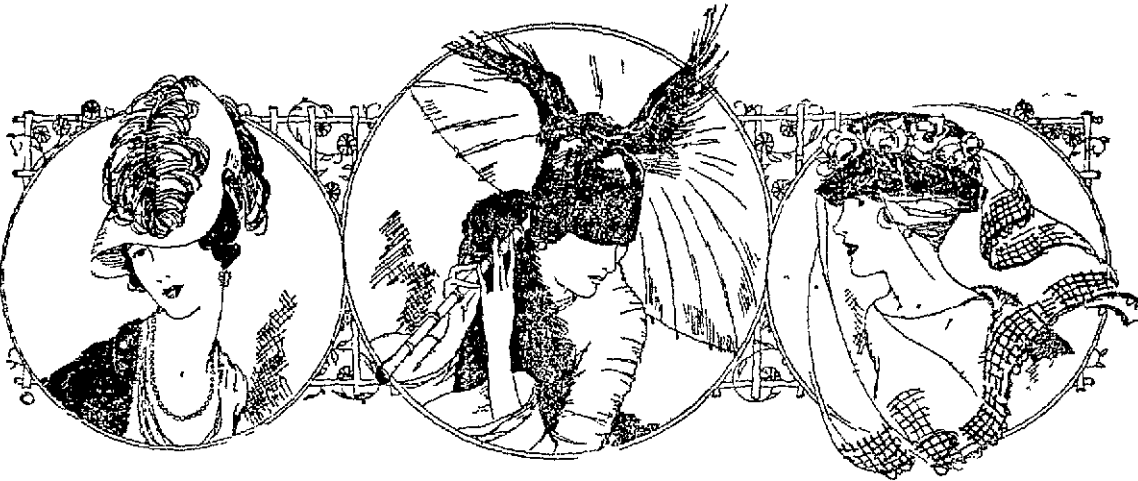

Ample proof of this will be given on every side during this Opening Exposition of the Fashions.

The season's figure silhouette will be slim and narrow—and the fashions accentuate and bring into popularity several style tendencies observed in Paris and New York recently—particularly in the suits and more tailored frocks.

The Opening displays of most carefully selected types is educational in its intent, as offering not merely a display of beautiful styles—though it does that in a royal way—but rather a series of types that will lead this season, each having its recognized followers and together, making a diversity that insures that individuality of dress.

All departments participate in the Exposition—to which you are invited.

LARGEST OUTPUT OF BRIQUETS IN HISTORY OF INDUSTRY TO DATE

Increase of 70,379 Tons, Or 17 Per Cent, in Quantity and $978,905, Or 44 Per Cent in Value.

The production of fuel briquets in the United States in 1918 was 477,235 net tons, valued at $3,212,793, an increase compared with 1917, of 70,379 tons, or 17 per cent, in quantity, and of $978,905, or 44 per cent, in value. The production in 1918, which represented the results of the third successive year of material progress in the industry, was the highest yet recorded. It was more than double that in 1915.

In the eastern states production increased 59 per cent, in the central states 27 per cent, but in the Pacific Coast states it decreased 38 per cent. The number of plants in operation in 1918 was one less than in 1917. Three of the plants that were operated in 1917 were idle in 1918—those of the Weaver Coal By-products company (formerly the American Coal Reduction & By-products company), in Colorado; the Bonanza Fuel company, in North Dakota; and the American Briquet company, in Pennsylvania. Two new companies, at Trenton, N. J., began operations in 1918, the Fuel Briquet company and the Trent Brick company. The Belknap Coal Briquette company of New York City, and the Anthracite Briquet company of Sunbury, Pa., expect to begin operations in 1919.

Of the 12 plants in operation in 1918, six used anthracite as a raw material, six Arkansas, semianthracite, one semibituminous slack, one anthracite slack and bituminous slack, one bituminous slack and semibituminous coal, and two oil-gas residue. Coal-tar pitch and asphaltic pitch were used as binders by all plants, one used sulphur pitch, two used no binder, and three used a vegetable binder or employed special processes.

TO FACE THE GARBAGE QUESTION CONSERVATIVELY.

The action of the citizens of Connecticut township in calling the attention of the city council to the importance of the public health which has developed from an attempt to burn garbage in the open, ought to bring the city government to realize that the collection and disposal of garbage can be temporized with no longer.

Several insufficient attempts have been made during the last year, and a considerable sum of money expended to solve the problem, but nothing but failure has resulted. Lack of effort has not always been the cause of failure, but it has been due to an unwillingness to attack the problem along the lines experience in other cities has demonstrated are essential to a satisfactory solution.

Each of our efforts to take care of garbage has been but a modification of the same plan—that of entrusting the job to private individuals. In some instances this has worked fairly well for a short time but the same difficulties have been encountered by each contractor sooner or later, and so formidable have these difficulties been that it has not been profitable to continue the collection. The nearest approach to success was last year when Councilman Utis, as superintendent of the department of public safety, gave much time and attention to the operation of a city collecting plan. In no instance, however, has a collector had the support of a rigid enforcement of the garbage ordinance and the people of the city have been left to their own choice as to whether or not they disposed of their garbage according to regulations. Under the circumstances it has not been surprising that our garbage collection plans have each in turn proved more or less lamentable failures. This fact makes it evident that the time has arrived when the city council must face this question with courage and determination to settle it and settle it right. Such a solution will involve expense just as other measures to better the city's health, peace, and safety of our citizens require expenditure of money.

Until the collection of garbage is made a municipal function, just as street cleaning is now, and is supported by the enforcement of proper ordinances, we will never get very much nearer a solution of the problem than we are now.

T. R. Was Taking No Chances.

ton and quoted from "Harper's Weekly.")

Theodore Roosevelt was not always a mighty hunter. It seems that he too had his day of being afraid of big game. But that was many years ago, when he was a little boy in short trousers, and used to play tag by madison Square in New York.

Opposite the Square on the east side stood a Presbyterian church, and the sexton, while airing the building one Saturday, noticed a small boy peering curiously in at the half-open door, but making no move to enter.

"Come in, my little man, if you wish to," said the sexton.
"No, thank you," said the boy. "I know what you've got in there."
"I haven't anything that little boys mayn't come in."

told his mother of the sexton's invitation and his unwillingness to accept it.

"But why didn't you go in, my dear?" she asked. "It is the house of God, but there is no harm in entering it quietly and looking about."

With some shyness the little fellow confessed that he was afraid to go in because the zeal might jump out at him from under a pew or somewhere.

"The zeal? What on earth do you mean by the zeal?" the mother inquired.

"Why," explained Theodore, "I suppose it is some big animal like a dragon or an alligator. I went to church last Sunday with Uncle Robert, and I heard the minister read from the Bible about the zeal; it frightened me."

Down came the Concorde from the library shelf, and one after another of the texts containing the word "zeal" was read to the child, whose eyes suddenly grew big and his voice excited, as he exclaimed, "That's it—the last one you read!" It was Psalm LXXIX: "For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

Theodore wasn't taking any chances.

A Seven-Day Week to Fight.

Harrisburg Telegraph.
The best way of settling the controversy over Sunday closing laws is to let the electorate stand as it is. There is no real public demand for a change.
Those who are out of the Rorka bill have selfish interests at stake. They want the nickel and the dime of the "dear people" in whom they profess so great an interest and that is all there is to it. Not one of them would be interested if it were not for the profits they hope to make from an "open Sunday."

Labour should stand firmly against any effort to make the Sabbath a working day. If the bill goes through the working people of Pennsylvania will have to fight a seven-day week.

Just Folks

Edgar A. Guest.

THE OUT-OF-DOORS MAN.

There's something, to this life, I say,
When all the skies are blue,
And trees are turning green once more, and all the grass is new,
There's more than gold and more than fame to gather through the year.

He's glad to be on hand to greet the robin that appears;
It's good to feel the earth grow warm
beneath the kindly sun.
To wander out of doors once more and know a wanderer's fun.

When nature wakes her children gay,
And dresses them anew
In all their frocks and calico in every style and hue,
And turns them loose, it seems to me
they miss a lot who hold That life is just a round of strife for earthly fame and gold.

For flowers and birds and shady woods
an every breeze that blows Hold just as sweet enchantments as the ones that wealth bestows.

He has not spent his life in vain who loves the patch of blue Above his head when days are fair,
And walks the meadows through,
And he who waits to his dog and tramps with him the fields,
Has found a source of happiness that money seldom yields.

And who shall say he is not rich though little gold he spends,
Who has the trees for comrades true and singing birds for friends?

There's something to this life, I say,
Far more than wealth or fame,
There is a splendid happiness which every man may claim.
And when the grass is on the trees
and all the brooks are clear,
There comes a balm for every ache, a smile for every tear.

For he who steals the hours from toil to claim the joys of spring Thanks God that he has lived once more to hear the robins sing.

At the Theatres

THE SOISON.

"A LITTLE MOTHER TO BE"—The fine has arrived when men and women cannot take the problem of the married mother and her baby behind closed doors and discuss it in whispers. They must come out into the open world and face it, as it is facing them with a new and imperative demand, which this world-rocking war has created, for a just and human solution. Whatever the cause of this problem—however embarrassing its inception—there is no sex in its solution. Shoulder to shoulder, men and women must face it. Eye to eye they must look upon it. Heart to heart they must discuss it. As brothers and sisters they must listen to it. And, together they must solve it. No subject is in closer touch with the hearts of pure-minded men and women of today than this one, when reverently handled, as it is in the Soison, the intensely human play, "A Little Mother to Be," which will for the first time be seen at the Soison theatre today and tomorrow. While the story is serious in its import, clever comedy runs abundantly throughout the play, which will be long remembered in that it deals with one of the vital problems confronting humanity at this time. This is not a moving picture.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"IN FOR THIRTY DAYS"—A Metro attraction in which May Allison, the charming screen star is seen in a splendid role, is being shown today. The picture tells a story with a refreshingly new plot. Both star and story are of the greatest charm and the combinations provides an entertainment which cannot be surpassed. The plot shows what happens to a young girl who only love up to the opening of the story is her smart race about and her mania for speed. To be arrested and sent to jail for thirty days and then under almost absolute laws to be hired out for twenty cents a day would be enough adventure for any girl, but fate has decreed more than that for this madcap young beauty. Cupid sets in and the racing car is sidetracked to give place to a mere man. The story moves with a rapidity which rivals the speed mania of the young heroine and Miss Allison shows that for breezy and interesting humor and sympathetic romance she is in class by herself. Other members of the cast include Robert Ellis, Mary Kelso and George Burrell. Tomorrow, Harry Morey will be presented in "Silent Strength and on Wednesday, Edith Roberts will appear in "A Taste of Life." Friday and Saturday, Mae Marsh, the celebrated Goldwyn star will be featured in "The Raging Strain," a romance of the Kentucky and Carolina.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but curative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with a calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after-effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquid or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "biliousness" and that lacy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "foggy" and "sloppy." Note how they "cleanse" the liver and how they "break up" the apical. Keep it a box. All druggists.

HELPED NEIGHBORS ALONG RIGHT ROAD

Mrs. L. Hupp, 3107 Warren street, Philadelphia, whose husband is with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, believes in helping others when she can. My sister took Tania and friends or fifty-second street spoke well of it. My very first trial of Tania was gratifying and I am getting better with every dose. I have so much faith in it I told a number of my neighbors in Warren street about it." The genuine J. I. Gore Co. Tania is now sold here by Belmont's, Harmon's and Connelville Drug stores.—Adv.

They are naturalized in the lawn and before the grass they come, and by the time the lawnmower is needed they are gone and are seen no more until the following spring.

In spite of the abbreviation of the school term this year caused by the influenza epidemic the township expects to have a large class of freshmen ready for the next term.

VIENNESE MERRY DESPITE DEFEAT

They Know They Were Beaten,
Admit It, and Let It Go at That.

SMART CAFES ARE CROWDED

People Are Well Dressed, Cheerful, and Pay Enormous Prices for Chocolate and Cakes—Futurs

Vienna.—Perhaps the most striking characteristic of Vienna just now is its citizens' indifference. To enter the crowded, smart, beautifully decorated cafes and watch the lively, laughing public there is to ask: "Do these people realize that they have lost the war and an empire, and are reduced to being citizens of a poverty-stricken state of under 8,000,000, with an enormous war debt, a bankrupt exchequer, and an ever-growing army of unemployed?"

If a foreigner visited this city's cafes and restaurants without being told that he was in a country that had been engaged in a disastrous war for over four years he would think its citizens summed themselves in peaceful prosperity. Laughter, careless talk about the opera, the ballet and a prominent actress' private life greet you from all sides. Not a word about war or politics.

Officers in bright colored uniforms with much gold lace and with rows of decorations glittering on their tunics, are as lively as the civilians, while the well-dressed women in costly fashionable furs and jewelry, leave nothing to those who enjoyed life here before the war. They are every bit as "chic" as gay and as up-to-date.

The Smartest Cafe.
Strange to relate, Vienna's smartest, dearest and most sought after cafe was opened during the war. The Cafe Kranz is the last word in luxury and attractiveness. Money has been lavished on its decorations, and its music is supplied by the orchestra of the Volks opera, conducted by the popular violinist and composer, Willy Kleinberg. Here idlers sip chocolate made with water at 50 cents a small cup, eat small cakes of white flour at 70 cents each, flirt and listen to as good music as you can enjoy anywhere in the world.

Each seat at one of the little round tables costs 12 cents on ordinary days but on holidays, such as New Year's eve, you cannot get inside the place under 80 cents, while the best seats, which are in the gallery upstairs, overlooking the high hall, where the music is, and the main part of the cafe, cost $1. Every seat is taken, very occupants happy, careless and absorbed merely in pleasure.

The same crowd is to be seen at Puchner's tea room, opened a year ago, with brocade hung walls and discreet corners. Here a cracker costs 50 cents and a cupful of chocolate 80 cents while a portion of imitation tea without sugar or milk can be had for 30 cents. The crowd here is as well dressed, as cheerful and as indifferent to the Versailles conference as that in the Cafe Kranz.

The Altan, another magnificent cafe built during the war, is on the ground floor of a hotel, unopened only because Vienna cannot find furniture for it. At least it was till a couple of days ago when the Italian military commission arrived here. General Segre in command and General Segrè in command. The Italian flag hangs from the balcony over the heads of the cafe habitués, but nobody mentions it, or the war and its disasters.

"Is This What We Fought For?"
Now and again some irritated looking officer in shabby uniform can be seen scowling on the thoughtless crowd with a look that says, "Is this what we fought for?" But when you are few and far between "The majority of the military people take recent events like the civil war in Vienna explained it to me.

"They are so happy the war is over."
It matters not what comes next, the problems of the future are left to professional politicians. The war is over, the cafes are attractive, the opera is open. These are the things which matter. No wonder you hear people say: "There is no fear of bolshevism, for people are too careless to want it."

This attitude is not the boastful one of the Germans, who tell the universe they are not beaten. The Austrians know he is beaten and says so. But so long as his pocketbook is stuffed with paper money he keeps smiling and goes to the restaurant and cafe of his choice to look at the pretty women and talk about the ballet. Nothing else is worth notice.

SHE BOOSTS CASTRO

Mexican General Employs Woman Press Agent.

Pretty Senorita Gets Stories About Chief in American Newspapers.

Juarez, Mexico.—Mexico is as modern as she is ancient. Gen. Jesus Augustin Castro, the new commander in chief of the northeastern military zone, not only has a woman press agent but a pretty one, to see that the general's campaign against the Villa forces receives proper attention from the Mexican and American border newspapers.

She is Senorita Teresa Rodriguez, daughter of a prominent Mexican politician of Mexico City, who came north soon after General Castro was relieved from active duties as sub-prefect of war to conduct a campaign against the bandits of the north. Senorita Rodriguez does not speak a word of English, but she succeeded in having her photograph and a sketch of General Castro printed in all the American border papers as soon as she arrived from Chihuahua City to begin her publicity campaign for the Mexican commander.

Yet Senorita Rodriguez said, in her most liquid Spanish, she did not wish to exert what the Americans called "patronage influence" to get her stories printed.

"Why should not the Mexicans adopt the best the Americans have originated?" she said at military headquarters to the Associated Press correspondent.

"The much-abused press agent has served a very useful purpose in presenting to the public the good features of every worthy movement, every campaign conducted by military or political leaders, and even your President Wilson recognized this when he appointed a director general of publicity."

"General Castro does not order me to have his deeds and pictures published, although he has done many brave deeds and is a sterling military man. What he instructed me to do, especially on the American side of the border, was to correct many false impressions subsisted. Mexican papers have given the American public about Mexico and its internal conditions. In doing this I feel I am serving my country, and besides I enjoy the work."

Largest Whistle.
Pittsburgh.—What is said to be the largest whistle in the world has been placed on one of the smokestacks of the Homestead Steel Works. The whistle, 200 feet above the ground is five feet long and one foot in diameter and is connected with a three-inch steam pipe. It requires 150 pounds of steam to blow the whistle, which can be heard twelve miles.

The idea.
"Jones is truly a golden-mouthed speaker."
"I don't know that anybody else has noticed it in his speeches."
"It's not his oratory which has made him golden-mouthed; it's his dentist."
A Long Record.
"How long have you had your cook?" asked the abrupt woman.
"More than two years," replied the patient hostess.
"My! One of you must be easy to please."

U. S. TRADE COMMISSION PROBES MANY LIBERTY BOND SWINDLING CASES

TREASURY AND CAPITAL ISSUES
COMMITTEE SUBMIT DATA—FAKERS EMPLOY WOMEN.

NUMEROUS cases of fraudulent operations by stock promoters who are alleged to be swindling Liberty Bond owners are before the Federal Trade Commission at Washington for investigation. The commission is having daily hearings at which testimony is being offered by those who have been victimized or their representatives and the commission has invited anyone who has such information to send it in.

The first testimony considered was a list of complaints compiled by the Treasury Department and the Capital Issues Committee. Other data which is to be given the investigators has been gathered by commercial interests.

Be a Sleuth!

Get his name!
Particularly if he tries to exchange his securities for your Liberty Bonds.
GET HIS NAME!
Get not only his name, and address if possible, but get all the "literature" he has. Then send it all to
The Federal Trade Commission,
Washington, D. C.

The Federal Trade Commission act provides a penalty or a fine or imprisonment for those who fail to report or who falsely report to the commission. The investigation is being speeded up to protect the coming issue, the Victory Liberty Loan.

Efforts of the government to check the swindles being perpetrated by the naive, well-dressed stock promoter have had such a dampening effect on his activities that he is taking refuge behind skirts. Women are now being employed, elderly-looking women with maternal ways which are calculated to disarm suspicion.

The latest warning from the Treasury Department is:
"Do not let the appearance or the dress or the sex of the Liberty Bond scalper disarm your suspicion. No reputable stock sales person will try to trade for your Liberty Bonds. Hold your bonds!"

The film will be released only through Liberty Loan committees and will be shown free.

Fordson Tractor Demonstration

On Wednesday, March 26th, a demonstration will be held on the Evans farm, right at the Park cemetery, at Uniontown, Pa. Right along the car line. Five cent fare from Uniontown.

Instead of talking about the Fordson tractor we prefer to show you what it will do.

To see the Fordson in operation will be more convincing than hours of talk.

We are going to show you how fast it will plow, how well it will plow what the average fuel consumption will be, how well it will handle two 14 inch bottoms how well it performs on hillsides. In fact we are going to give the Fordson a harder series of tests than 99 out of 100 users will ever give it.

Whether you intend to buy a tractor or not we want you to attend this demonstration. Every progressive farmer ought to see it.

The Fordson is a big factor today in farming the world over. Thousands are sold every month.

Fordson owners are increasing their production—beating their neighbors on crop yields, on acreage cultivation, on profits.

WOLVES of the SEA

62 RANDALL PARRISH

I bent over and touched him. The fellow lay in a heap with no perceptible heart-beat, no semblance of breathing. My fingers sought his face, and I could scarcely suppress a cry of surprise—he was not Estada. Who, then, was he? What could have been his purpose in thus invading this stateroom? All I could grasp was the fact that the fellow was not the Portuguese—possessed a smooth face, long hair, and was a much smaller man. I dragged the body where the light illumination from the after port fell directly on the upturned face. The features revealed were unfamiliar—those unquestionably of a half-breed Indian. Dorothy crossed to my side, her foot striking a knife, which came glimmering into the narrow range of light. She started in horror at the ugly weapon, and then at the ghastly countenance.

"He came to murder!" See, his knife lies there. Why should he have sought to kill me?"

"It is all mystery," I admitted. What shall be done with the body? It cannot be left lying exposed here; no one would believe you killed him, and my presence must not be suspected."

"Could it," she suggested, "be dropped through the port?"

She shrunk back from touching the inanimate figure, yet it required the combined efforts of both to force the stiffening body through the porthole. We could distinguish footprints on the deck above, but these were regular and undisturbed—he slow promenade from rail to rail of the officer on watch. Clearly nothing had been heard or seen to awaken suspicion.

"You should be questioned tomorrow you had best know nothing," I said gravely. "Do not think you will be, for surely an attack can be no plan of Estada's. It could gain no advantage. The fellow was pillaging on his own account; if he is missed it will be supposed he fell overboard, and no one will care. You are not afraid to remain here alone?"

"No; I am not greatly frightened, but shall try and bar the door with a chair. I have no key."

"Then I'll leave you; half of my watch below must be gone by now. I'll take the fellow's knife along, as it must not be found here."

We parted with a clasp of hands, as I opened the stateroom door and slipped out into the cabin. To my surprise the light over the table had been extinguished, rendering the cabin so black I had to actually feel my way forward. The lantern must have been put out since then by some confederate. After a moment of hesitation I found my way across to my own stateroom and pressed open the door.

The tilt of the knife in my belt attracted my attention, and I drew it forth, curious to learn if it bore any mark of ownership. My eyes were instantly attracted to a dark stain on both hilt and blade. I held it to the light—it was the stain of blood, and my hands were also reddened by it. In that first instant of horror I hurried the weapon out through the open port into the sea. Blood! There had been murder committed on board, and the fellow I had struck down was seeking refuge, endeavoring to find concealment following his crime. Ay, but what about the light in the cabin? It had been extinguished after the fleeing fugitive had entered Dorothy's stateroom. Did this mean that the slayer had an accomplice? If so, then the killing was not the result of a mere personal quarrel amidships, or in the forecabin, but the result of some conspiracy. I thought of Sanchez, and of Estada's plan to obtain control of the ship. Could this be its culmination? And was the Spaniard already lying dead in his cabin?

Nothing came of my thought—only confusion; nor did I dare investigate for fear of becoming more deeply involved in the tragedy. No, there was nothing to be done; my safety, and the safety of the girl depended on our apparent ignorance of what had occurred. Convinced myself of this, I washed the blood stains from my hands and lay down in the bunk fully dressed to await my call.

When called I exchanged but few words with LeVeré. He went quickly to the door, and I followed him.

occurred during my watch. The dawn came cold and gray but with clearing skies. I climbed into the main crossbeams and swept the horizon with a glass. Not so much as a speck rewarded my efforts, and I descended the railings, shouting to the boatswain to call the port watch. Watkins came aft to the wheel and I sent the fellow thus relieved down into the cabin to rout out LeVeré. The two returned to deck together, the negro glancing about curiously without mounting the ladder.

"You call Senor Estada yet?" he questioned.

"No; I had no orders to do so."

"He told me to call him at daylight. Here you, Amada; go wake up the senior."

The seaman disappeared, while LeVeré crossed the poop deck and stood beside me looking out across the expanse of sea.

Amada emerged from the companion and started up at us, shading his mouth with one hand as he spoke.

"He answer nothing, Senor LeVeré."

"Was the door locked?"

"I know not, senior; I not try to open it."

"The old-headed swine," said LeVeré.

"He answer nothing, senior."

"The swine," said LeVeré. "I suppose I'll have to go myself."

"We'll go down together, senior," I said quietly. "Estada must be sick; I could hear the rumbling Amada kicked up even on deck here. No man could sleep through that racket."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New Conspiracy.

The interior of the cabin appeared desolate in the gray light of dawn. I led the way directly to Estada's stateroom. My heart pounded like a hammer as I rapped on the wooden panels and waited some response from within. There was no answer, no sound of movement, and I rapped again more loudly, my questioning eyes seeking LeVeré's face. "He was listening as intently as myself."

"There is something wrong, senior," he whispered, "for he was ever a light sleeper."

The door was unlocked, the latch yielding instantly to the hand, and I stepped within. A glance told everything. Estada lay in his bunk, with one leg dangling outside, and his head crooked against the side wall. His very posture was that of sudden death, even had it not been pictured by the ghastly face, and the dark pool of blood underneath. I heard an exclamation from LeVeré and stood for an instant utterly unable to move. I knew already what I should find, yet finally forced myself forward—he was stone dead, pierced with three knife thrusts. I stood up and faced the mulatto, whose countenance was fairly green with horror.

"What do you know about this, Senor LeVeré?" I asked sternly. "The man has been murdered, knifed. Who did it—and why?"

"Who Did It—and Why?"

He could scarcely answer, gripping at the table for support, and never removing his gaze from the face of the dead man. Yet I believed his words; was convinced this was not the terror of guilt.

"My God! I cannot tell; I have never dreamed of this."

"Had the man enemies. Anyone you would suspect?"

"Enemies? Ay, plenty of them; we all have. We expect that at our trade. This ship is full of devils ready enough to do such a job; but I could not name the one who did it. I know of no cause. I have heard nothing."

"I believe you, LeVeré," I said.

"What can we do, senior?"

"Do! We must talk that over first. We cannot meet this thing until we are prepared. There is more danger in hasty action than anything else."

I shut the door behind us and turned the key. It was a relief to get outside, even into that dismal cabin, beyond view of Estada's dead face. LeVeré, who had evidently lost his nerve, sank into a chair.

"You fear an uprising, a mutiny?" I questioned, "when this is reported?"

"What will prevent?" he asked.

"The captain cannot stir; the mate is dead; the men already crazed because we take no prizes. They will murder only and take control. Those devils amidships."

"And who leads them? Who would be captain?"

"Manuel Estevan," he whispered.

"I thought as much. Then it is Manuel Estevan we must secure first—before they know. Whatever his men may know of what has occurred they will make no move until they get his orders. We must stop the possibility of his issuing any. Without a leader the advantage is ours."

"You mean to kill him?"

"Only as a last resort. There is no good feeling between those quartered amidships and the crew."

"No, senior; it is hate generally, although they are not all alike. The real sailors are mostly captured men; they serve to save their lives, and only for these others on board could not be held long. Your plan, senior, is to set the one against the other?"

"Yes, if possible. These sailor men are of all races. Can they be trusted?"

"Some might be, sir; it is hard to tell how many. It is not the race which counts so much, senior. There are these among them who would not care to return to slavery."

"And you, LeVeré?"

He spread his hands and shrugged his shoulders. "There is no hope of me; I was born to the free life."

"What then is it with you?"

"Hate, senior—revenge," and his teeth gleamed savagely. "I would spit on this Manuel who seeks to be chief. I can never be—no; I am of black skin, with negro blood in my veins, and white men would never have it so. But I can hate, senior. That is why I am with you now, if the devil so will. Your plan might work—tell me more of it."

"What are the odds, say you—thirty to a hundred? Ay, but surprise will overcome that. My plan is this: First to secure Manuel as quietly as possible but at whatever cost. With him in our hands, or dead, the buccanniers have no leader. What then? There are men in the crew on deck and in the forecabin to be trusted—Watkins is one, and he will know others, a dozen no doubt. They will be enough. We will whisper the truth to these, and have them ready for a signal. The forward door from amidships is closed by iron bars—is it not?"

"Si, senior," his eyes again sparkling with interest. "The men quarreled, and there was fighting."

"And there is no escape in that direction and it can be no great task to close any passage leading aft. Lower the deck hatch and we have those devils below caged like so many rats. There need be no fighting; starvation will bring them to terms."

"But, senior, your dozen men cannot guard the buccanniers below and also manage the bark. The crew are not all lumps—many will sympathize with those thus locked beneath deck. Catch them, and a friend of Manuel, he will fight, and there are others to back him."

"I know that, LeVeré. The whole plan is desperate, but there is no other possible. Here is my scheme. There is a gun rack in the cabin to arm the dozen men we can trust. The others have nothing but their sheath knives. The buccanniers can be secured below, but these others I can secure only by what is happening. As soon as we have control of the ship we'll round them up forward. They won't dare face the guns. I'll give them their choice."

"And what will you tell them, senior?"

"I caught my breath, conscious of his meaning. My secret hope could not be revealed to this fellow. The answer came quickly to my lips."

"The whole truth, Senor LeVeré—that Manuel conspired to seize the bark through a mutiny of the buccanniers; that these were to be turned loose with license to kill anyone on board who opposed them; that their real purpose was to divide among themselves all the treasure below then wreck the vessel and escape with it. That to this end Estada had already been murdered. I shall explain that we discovered this conspiracy just in time to save them from butchery, and they must stand by us or else submit to those hell-hounds."

"And after that, senior?"

"Why, Porto Grande, of course," I admitted heartily. "The men will understand what means a handful of gold for each of them if they go ashore. Why, LeVeré, they will make more apiece than by looting a half dozen ships, and with no fighting. It will be a fortune for you and me."

His somber eyes lighted up, started by this new idea, and he sprang to his feet.

"You mean that, senior? We divide what is below the hull for Porto Grande? I hear you right? You not mean to murder? You stay pirate?"

I laughed, my nerves tingling to the success of my ruse—he had taken the tempting bait like a hungry fish.

"Why, of course. I am not such a fool as to throw away this chance. This is our chance, LeVeré. If we put the Namar into Porto Grande, with Sanchez on board and alive, and those hell-hounds locked below, we'll get anything we ask for. We'll be the cocks of the walk if he shouldn't live through, why then we'll have a ship, and can run the game alone. Either way, if we win, the prize is ours—and if we stick together we win."

My apparent enthusiasm caught the fellow. I could read the working of his mind in his face. This new view of the situation promised wealth, power, the total defeat of Estevan; everything he most desired.

"You think Senor Sanchez live?"

"What difference? If he lives he owes his life to us. If he dies the bark is in our hands, and the treasure. Once we have won we care nothing if he live or die. Are we together in this?"

He thrust out a lean yellow hand, and I gripped it.

"Si, senior; I am with you."

"You pledge your word, Francisco?"

"I pledge it, senior."

"Good! And you have mine. Now to work—first Manuel Estevan, and then the men on deck."

Laying the Trap.

more easily than I had anticipated.

We caught Manuel sound asleep, and LeVeré had shrewd hands at his throat before the fellow could grasp a weapon. The narrowness of the stateroom prevented my taking much part in the affair, but the mulatto needed no help, as he dragged the cursing Spaniard from his bunk to the deck and throttled him savagely. Indeed he would have killed the fellow had I not intervened and twisted his hands loose, leaving Estevan barely conscious. A blanket ripped into strips served to bind him securely enough for the present, but I thought it best to lock the door, and keep the key in my own pocket. LeVeré would have knifed him even as he lay there helpless, but for my threat and insistence.

Once back in the cabin my eyes distinguished the frightened face of the steward peering forth at us from out the dark of the passage leading forward.

"Come here, Gonsales," I said sternly. "Step lively, lad; there's nothing for you to do here. Senor Estada has been killed during the night, and we have just captured his murderer. I explained, "There is reason to believe this act was part of a conspiracy to seize the ship in connection with those fellows amidships. Does that passage lead to their quarters?"

"It did once, senior, but now there is a cleaved door of oak, studded with iron, not only locked, but barred on this side. There are but two keys—one for the captain and the other for him who commands the buccanniers."

I stood there a moment, considering this information. The only way the mutineers could reach the cabin then would be from the deck, descending through the companion. So long as they remained unaware of the capture of Manuel there was little danger of their taking such action.

"Very well, steward," I said. "You go on your work as though nothing had happened. If any word of this affair gets to the crew, or to those fellows forward, I'll hold you responsible. You are not to leave this cabin without my permission, nor speak to anyone. LeVeré."

The mulatto faced me respectfully enough, and I had a feeling he would obey orders, largely because he dared not rebel.

"They will be wondering why you are not on deck. It will be better for you to take charge of the watch at once, and keep the men busy. Believe Watkins at the wheel and send the man down to me. He can choose the fellows who will stick better than you could, and then can circulate among them without arousing suspicion."

Watkins soon shuffled down the steps. He whistled off his cap and stood staring.

"I put my hand on his shoulder. "Tom," I said soberly, "we are in the same boat, and understand each other. The chance has come for both of us, if we play the cards right. Listen while I tell you the situation, and what I plan to do."

I told it briefly, wasting no words, yet relating every fact. He listened eagerly, but without interruption until the end.

"What do you make of it?" I asked.

"My cure was so wonderful that I feel I owe a debt of gratitude to Plant Juice that I never can repay," said Mrs. Alice Wilson, who resides at No. 137 Fourth street, Pittsburg, in a recent interview. Continuing, she said:

MRS. ALICE WILSON.

"I had been ill for the past 18 years; at times I was so bad that no one thought I would live. I was treated for catarrh of the stomach, but nothing seemed to help me. I would have fainting spells and fall down anywhere and remain unconscious for hours at a time. At times my mind was a blank for days. My circulation would stop and my hands and feet would become cold and clammy. My food would not digest in my stomach and I was obliged to eat liquids. I lost in weight being reduced from 136 to 138 pounds. My friends all predicted that I would not live six months. A friend of my husband's recommended Plant Juice to him and he purchased a bottle for me. After taking about one-half of the bottle I got better. I have been using Plant Juice now for some time, and I am glad to state for publication that I have entirely regained my health and am entirely cured. I can eat any kind of food and digest it perfectly. I do not have any more aches or pains and do not have any more fainting spells. I am now doing all of my housework for the first time in years. At the present time I weigh 165 pounds. I can recommend Plant Juice for what it has done for me, and I know it will help all sufferers of stomach and nervous disorders if they will try it. My husband and myself are both truly grateful to your medicine for restoring me to health."

on—some of the men forward are in on it. You've got the rug leader."

"Manuel, you mean. Who did he count on for help in the forecabin?"

"Cochese, and a handful of others, niggers and Spaniards, mostly. They meant to pull the affair off either today or tonight. Your plan gives us a fair chance, sir. A dozen good men on deck might do the business."

"But are there a dozen aboard to be trusted?"

"Well, yes, sir. I rather think there are. I'd say that in both watches there's maybe fourteen to be relied on."

"In my watch there's Jones, Harwood and Slama, either English or Welsh. They're all right. Then there's a nigger named Sam; Schmitt, a Dutchman, with his partner, whose name I don't know, and two Frenchies, Ravel and Pierre. That makes eight, nice counting myself. Then in the starboard watch I'd pick out Jim Carter and Joe Cole, two Swedes, Carlson and Ole Hallin, and another nigger. There are a couple of Finns who ought to be with us, but I can't talk their lingo. That would give us sixteen out of thirty, and it's quite likely some of the others would take a hand with us, if they thought it was safe. I haven't any use though, sir, for Francisco LeVeré. There ain't a worse scamp aboard."

"I know that," I admitted, "but he had to be used."

"And what is my part now?"

"This is my watch below, and it will be best for me to keep off the deck until all is prepared. You sound these men and get them together; wake up the ones in the starboard watch you feel sure are all right, and have them slip quietly on deck. Then we'll get about, and of course you are with us, ready for business—the rest will be done in a hurry. I'll wait here for your report."

At the very best Watkins could scarcely perform the task assigned him in less than an hour. The success or failure of our effort depended entirely upon taking these fellows by complete surprise. If it came to an open fight our cause was hopeless, for that would mean fourteen or fifteen men unarmed, pitted against over a hundred thoroughly equipped and trained fighters. Only by confining them below, with hatches battened down, and a carrousel trained upon them would we be safe.

I sat where I could watch the stairs, and the entire forward part of the cabin. Gonsales lowered the table, and began in preparing the morning meal. Finally he announced breakfast.

"Suppose you rap on the lady's door, and ask if she will join me. Say your message is from Senor Gates."

She came at once and seated herself opposite me, and we spoke of the weather while Gonsales served. He was still hovering about, but my anxiety to have a word with her alone caused me to send him to attend Captain Sanchez. We waited until he disappeared within the after stateroom, bearing a tray; then her eyes suddenly lifted to mine, filled with questioning.

"Tell me what has happened?" she breathed eagerly. "I heard the noise of a struggle out here, and voices conversing. Why are you alone?"

I leaned over to speak in as low a tone as possible. And I told her the situation in detail and my plans. She sat silently gazing at me across the table, her parted lips trembling.

"Then the sooner we act the better. Watkins, have LeVeré order these men aft. Let him say that Senor Estada wishes them to break out some stores in the lazaret. They need be here only long enough for us to distribute these arms among them, and for me to speak a word of instruction to them."

"But have I no part? Is there no way in which I can help?" asked the girl.

"You have your pistol? Then remain here. I shall have to go on deck with the men, and will not dare leave them a moment until the ship is absolutely secure. Manuel is locked in that stateroom, but must not be communicated with by anyone. It will be your part to see that Gonsales neither enters that passage leading amidships, nor approaches this door. Keep him in sight. You will save us a man. Wait here now until I see how securely this passage forward is closed."

It was as described to me—a heavy oak door, nail studded, not only locked, but held firmly in place by a stout iron bar. There was not the faintest possibility of any entrance aft, except through assistance from this side. As I returned to the cabin, Gonsales came out of the captain's room and crossed the deck. At sight of me he stopped instantly.

"Gonsales," I said, "you are to remain in this cabin until I give the word. The lady here has a pistol, and orders to shoot if you attempt to either enter this passage, or approach the door of Manuel's stateroom. How did you find Sanchez?"

"Sitting up in his bunk, senior, and able to eat."

"Does he know what is occurring on board?"

"No, senior. He questioned me, but I only told him everything was all right, so far."

In my heart I believed the fellow deliberately lied, but there was no opportunity to question him further, for at that moment the door of the companion opened and a miscellaneous group of men thronged down the stairs. They were a rough hairy lot, here and there a sturdy English countenance meeting my gaze, but the faces were largely foreign, with those of two negroes conspicuous.

"Twelve here, sir; I couldn't get Harwood down from the foretop," said Watkins.

"Ann there are others below who will join us?"

"Yes, sir, six more I count on."

"Which means lads, that with Harwood, Senor LeVeré, and myself, we'll total twenty-one in this shanty. Now I'll tell you what is up—Watkins gave you some of it no doubt, but a word from me will make it clearer. You no pirate? I'm an English sailor, shanghaied. Estada named me first officer because I understand navigation."

I stopped speaking, staring at one of the faces before me; all at once it appeared familiar. "What is your name, my man?"

MOUNT PLEASANT, March 24.—Thugs visited the Main street home of Dr. F. L. Marsh on Friday evening and took with them three or four dollars in change and some old coins. The same night they entered the home of John Smelko. Here a burglar walked very boldly through the house and into Mrs. Smelko's bedroom. She saw him plainly from a light that was burning in the hall, she said. She describes him as being young, possibly 15 or 16 years old, wearing a mask and a soft hat, pulled down and hid his face. He was in shirt sleeves or had his sleeves of his coat turned wrong side out. Here they took a revolver. Mr. Smelko secured a rifle and shot three times but did not touch the thief as no trace of blood could be found.

The home of Jack Acton at Washington and First streets also was entered and $3 was taken.

The police have followed several clues but, as yet, none have been apprehended.

During the day Friday boys visited the home of Mar on Hubbard and William Griffin on Church street. At the home of Mar on Hubbard they entered and left without being seen but at the Griffin house which is a double house Clark Bronson living in the other side saw two boys, standing across the street. Mr. Bronson who was reading at the window was asked if the family next door was at home. Mr. Bronson went to lunch. Soon he heard a noise in the other side of his house and thought that the Griffins had returned home but on looking up was surprised to see the same boys going out of the house with their arms full of groceries. Mr. Bronson followed them heading toward Standard on Smithfield street the boys go away from Bronson and have not been apprehended.

On Thursday night at Patrolman M. J. McCully was walking up West Washington street the breaking of glass apparently behind the home of G. W. Stoner attracted his attention. The officer crossed the street into the yard but saw nothing but the "crotch dog" that patrols with McCully. He turned the fence to the next yard and led a man a chase out the alley and down Spring street where McCully lost track of him.

A short time ago about 9 o'clock in the morning McCully was patrolling the West End when he came unexpectedly upon a man who stepped out very cautiously from a house. When he saw McCully's cap he ran. McCully followed him down Quaker street. The man reached the corner alley that branch out before McCully got to him and made his escape. The description of this man does not correspond with that given by Mrs. Smelko.

Mr. Harbaugh will likely have it on exhibition.

Spring Suit of Plain Cloth

One may choose a straight line suit or a belted suit or one of the always popular semi-fitted models with equal assurance this spring. But there is a youthfulness in straight lines that is very engaging. The added length of fashionable skirts compels designers to cast about for means of softening these uncompromising straight lines and here is one clever solution of this difficulty. The skirt is slightly draped at the back so that it inclines toward the ankles, hanging in, from the hips down. At the back a row of bone buttons, set several inches apart accentuate the long line.

The coat has a panel back and is longer at the back than at the sides. It is open to the waistline. The designer has introduced pleasing curves at the bottom and called attention to them with a silk braid that follows their lines on the side panels and is extended to the back in an attractive arrangement. Patch pockets outlined with braid, also have curved flaps at the top, bound with braid and finished with a bone button.

This coat fastens with two buttons and loops at the front, over one of those smart silk vests that play so

WEAKNESS REMAINS LONG AFTER Influenza

Reports Show That Strength,
Energy and Ambition Return
Very Slowly to Grippe Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building-up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body but will also help to build up and strengthen the run-down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-ferron—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-ferron—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also, probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gelatin that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health as you can see by reading this formula not forgetting the great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-ferron is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak run-down person to regain normal strength, energy, ambition and endurance.

Bio-ferron is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—seven a day until health strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and it for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-ferron. It is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin, Calcium, Iron, Phosphorus, Gelatin, Manganese, Potassium, Zinc, Vanadium, Powdered Gentian, Phosphoric Acid, Cinnamon, Capsicum, Kola.
